Hash Trash Run # 1215—Scribe—Liselle

Well having my first experience hashing in Barbados involved a few new experiences. Markus, my husband and I arrived with Dave and Giselle and their neighbour Carol. As Dave would not have it any other way we were rushed out of the house to get there on time.

There was a good turn out of women, men, children and dogs. There was even a little chick present. The hares Tracey and Kendra announced simply that it will be nice run and enjoy. No long spiel or anything! So off we went trying to find the right trail which turned out to be quite a challenge. By the way, I wondered why the hares sent us off on our own while they stayed back with the beer! I thought this was a little strange but went my merry way anyway. The group seemed a bit lost a bit while the front pack went in all directions trying to find the right trail. This took us all a while but eventually we got it right. So off we went again the trail lead us uphill if this is possible in Barbados. At the top of the hill we lost the trail again and I believe this was supposed to be a check and again we seemed a bit lost. The pause became a social affair for some of us while the strong and fit tried to find the right trail. Eventually after approximately half an hour we decided there must be some mistake and went through an X. After this point I was happy to see that we were going off road. Coming from Trinidad I prefer to get off the road and do some running in the bushes. We passed by a cane field which made things a little more interesting. The trail got muddy and we got to experience the clay and sticky soil indigenous to the island.

My knees were thanking me for this. From this point on we continued on this type terrain and ended up in a beautiful residential area. There was a bit of a downhill run which is always a relief to move in this direction after an hour of running. The on in was short and sweet. Liked that! At this point after strolling through most of the trail Giselle and David Rowe suddenly tried to pick up the pace trying to convince all that they were running at this pace throughout the run.

I know it was just a couple of days after Halloween so I told myself that it should not be a surprise to see someone donning a silver wig and what seems like a cape. It turns out that he was what the Bajan hashers call the 'religious advisor'. I realized his role was similar to the Hash Master in Trinidad. The procedure from this point onwards was similar to the Trinidad Hash without the songs and we were expected to kneel before the religious adviser and given the choice of rum or beer. I was astonished to see the hares received approval from the crowd in spite of the fact that we had to run through an X I think they deserved some sort of punishment for this gross error!!

So in the end I think it was a good run, good lime afterwards and looking forward to seeing you all again in Trinidad for Carnival I believe??!!

On on!!
